

Pomona Valley Hospital Medical Center Surprises Newborns With Special Delivery from Nike

New parents, whose bundles of joy arrived on August 20 at Pomona Valley Hospital Medical Center (PVHMC), the day the USA Women's Basketball team won a gold medal, received an additional special delivery: Rio-themed Nike baby shoes. The gifts were in honor of local Chino native Diana Taurasi, a member of the gold medal team.

Nike partnered with hospitals in the hometown areas of select gold medal-winning athletes. So, when Taurasi won her fourth gold, PVHMC's littlest patients scored big.

The 'My First Nike' gift box featured the Nike Waffle 1 shoes along with highlights of Taurasi's achievement and an inspirational note encouraging the new babies to find their own future potential.

PVHMC has been providing maternity services at its state-of-the-art medical center for more than 100 years. With nearly 7,500 babies born each year, PVHMC is the second largest birthing hospital in California.
