PROGRAM DESCRIPTION

This symposium is designed for physicians, nurses and other health care professionals responsible for the care of mothers and/or neonates. The faculty will address the management of various clinical situations that arise in the practice of obstetrics and neonatal care. Topics presented will explore areas of rapid change with an emphasis on optimizing the outcome for mother and infant.

Upon completion of this conference, participants should be able to:

- Discuss current CMQCC projects and their expected outcomes.
- List two ways to correct ventilation if air is not getting into a neonate.
- Review the impact of cannabis use during pregnancy and lactation.
- Identify what human trafficking is including types and characteristics.
- Examine the rationale behind the behavior of difficult people.
- Understand mental health diagnosis in the perinatal period.
- Realize the benefits of nitrous oxide in labor and delivery.
- Describe which infants may be at risk for early onset neonatal sepsis.
- State what actions have been proven to not prevent meconium aspiration syndrome.
